Nature Journal

What is a Nature Journal?

A nature journal is where you can record animals, plants, and other things in nature that you observe. In your journal, you can make pages based on the places you visit, but you don't need to travel far to record things in your journal! Your backyard has plenty of things you can journal about. Your journal is a place to draw pictures, keep photos, press flowers or plants, and write descriptions about things in nature.

Materials

- Premade pages or a notebook
- Hole punch
- Ribbon or string
- Writing Utensils
- (Optional) Color pencils or other tools to decorate your journal with

Instructions 1

See the attached sheets and decide if you would like to use the premade template or make your own from scratch.

2 If you decide to use the premade template, print out the sheets. Make sure to make multiple copies of the journal entry pages! Once you have all your pages printed, stack them in the order you would like. Using your hole punch, make two sets of two holes. Take ribbon or string and bind the separate sets as the picture demonstrates.

3 If you would like to make your own journal, use a notebook and make sure to title everything page with who is recording, the date, the place, and the weather. Then record your observations and decorate it as you wish!
